Hearing Feedback

Weekly Report 4/17 to 4/23

During this past week in ISM, I felt accomplished with what I have done so far in terms of getting ahead and thinking towards Final Presentation Night- I completed the rough draft of my educational video and received feedback from friends, family, and my mentor. It has been invaluable for any project/ assignment that I have done so far in ISM to hear the opinions of others and reflect back on what the good and bad have been. So for my biggest project (my final product) I was able to use the advice that I was given and put it towards this project. I know what little adjustments to tweak in order to produce the most effective video for my audience.

During my mentor visit, after hearing some feedback from my research portfolio, I became aware of what exactly Mrs. Tribuzi's job consists of and the overall impact that her role as a pharmacist plays in her life. She wanted me to understand that by having an advanced medical knowledge, she was able to advise people in her personal life of what route of medication they should pursue. The overall impact that her job has is astounding to me and the future looks bright as college is quickly approaching and my curiosity for the field of pharmacy continues to expand.
